

The Kennedy Assassination Plot:

Who was Tom Davis?

And why was he Killed...for “something he did not do?”

From confused ex-military bank robber to international gun runner for the CIA, what could top this man's life for a downward spiral?

How about cowardly not doing his part in a highly choreographed post-assassination plot.

His running away, placed the cover-up into a tailspin. This resulted in requiring Jack Ruby to clean up the resulting mess of Oswald being alive and talking.

Based on the available information, the following hypothesis attempts to reconcile the known events. Chip Cook (Tom Davis' ex-brother-in-law)

Introduction by Chip Cook

What role does Tom Davis have in the Kennedy Assassination? His name is not commonly associated with it. However, pieces of the puzzle point to his “not doing his job” created the need to fix things. And the unknown story of the chaotic aftermath behind the cover-story.

Like many, I grew up wondering what was the real story behind the Kennedy assassination. What I could not imagine was I knew more about it than I thought. This is my story of what new pieces of the puzzle I bring to the table. I will let the evidence do the convincing.

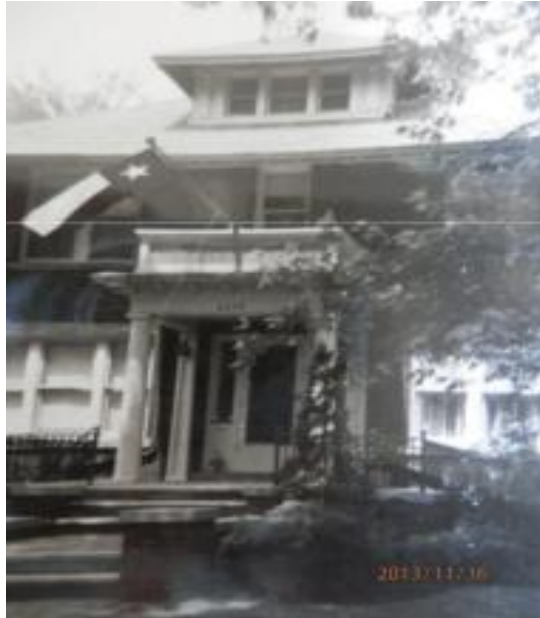

"For most of my life I asked, 'Who killed Kennedy?' Today, after decades of reading and personal experience, I find myself asking a different question: 'Who didn't?'"

I will identify my sources with yellows.

My story starts in 1957. Tom Davis was a soldier stationed near Detroit, Michigan. He married into our family. In less than two years he was gone.

Our collective family opinion, in hindsight:

Tom was raised on a Texas Ranch to be a “man.” Problem: His older sister could out ride and shoot him. He goes into the military to become a man. Does not fit in. While married to my sister he drops out of college, exhibits strange behavior, gets Coe pregnant and robs a bank. None of which builds character. To us he was a coward. A personality trait that might, in the future, explain the entire cover-up debacle.

The Texan

( Family Recollections )

In 1958 my sister married a handsome Texan named Tom Davis.

He had been in the army. On the boat ride to the Bob-Bo-Low amusement park island, he used me to meet my sister. It was love at first sight for Tom and my sister Coe.

They wed very quickly, and Tom moved his stuff into our attic. Coe and Tom were both going to the University of Michigan to get their BA degrees. One day by sheer luck, I found the mother lode of men's magazines in one of his boxes.

Coe and Tom's wedding. I am on the lower left.

The Texan was Tom Davis; we liked him, even his gun

Tom and Coe

( Family Recollections )

The story of Tom and Coe was passion gone wrong. We all loved him. He was a real southern charmer. Not only did my sister love him... she was crazy over him. While attending University of Michigan, Tom started having problems. Coe hid the real problems from us. However, we could feel the “sea change” or tension in their relationship when we would visit them.

I was thrilled when Santa brought me the Red Rider BB gun like in the movie, A Christmas Story. Everyone thought I would shoot out an eye. After celebrating a little too much, the twist to my story was Dad and Tom Davis somehow ended up in a shooting contest with a Christmas tree ball as the target. Unfortunately, on the other side of the tree was a plate glass French door. The resulting hole was very small and scotch tape worked well to keep the cold air out. Needless to say, Grandma and Mom were none too happy. Grandpa and I tried to stay out of it.

Tom dropped out of school. Coe tried to balance their issues and still get a degree. Tom was becoming more and more agitated. After Coe graduated and they moved home, things went bad fast. Supposedly, Tom bought and sold old guns. He had “friends” in downtown Detroit. (One friend, later, was the notorious Jack Ruby. He was the man who killed President Kennedy’s assassin in 1963.) These questionable relationships were a growing concern for the family.

One afternoon Mom and I drove up to the house, and there on the roof was Tom with a rifle. After a while, he came down and explained that a gun deal went bad; and there were people after him. I did not know what to make of it, but it did not sound truthful to me. What did I know? I was just a kid. However, his stories just got wilder.

One day I saw my sister crying in front of Mom. I pretended not to notice them. I assumed it was about Tom, and it was indirectly. Coe was pregnant, and Tom had no job. Everything seemed in free fall for all of us, but it got worse.

The shit hit the fan when Tom robbed a bank. This was not your normal heist. On a corner there were two banks. One bank was a state bank and one other was federal. Tom decided to rob the Federal Bank of Detroit. He pushed the written demand for money towards the cashier. Then he turned and walked out of the bank without a cent. He sat in his car waiting for the police to come and arrest him.

I guess it was clear to all that his heart was not in the act. We assume he did not want the responsibility of marriage with a child.

His Texas family included Judges and many other influential people. This was a first offense for him. Since no one was hurt and no money was taken, he was determined to be innocent by reason of insanity in pretrial hearings. He was committed to a psychiatric ward for evaluation and treatment for a personality disorder. I don’t think it even went to trial.

He gave my sister a divorce and full custody of the son to be born baby Scott. After six months, he was released; and he left Detroit to return to Texas. However, this was not the last we would hear from Tom. That part of the story will be picked up in Maine two years later.

Out of the Blue

( Family recollection )

In the summer of 1961, the phone rang. We were all caught off guard.

It was Tom Davis. This was not a good surprise. We had stood up for him at the hearing, and he was grateful. However now he wanted to see his son. It did not seem like a good idea, but how could you say no to a man wanting to see his son? Now there was absolutely no room in the inn. Mom told him she would call around and find a room for him for a week. That was fine with him. He was on a “mission”, and he could only spare a week.

After he hung up, we looked at each other and collectively said, “Mission?” This was the only preparation we had for what was to follow. When his cab arrived, we were in shock. He was as brown skinned as a Mexican and sported a Spanish style thin mustache and chin hair. He was no longer blond. Dark brown hair drastically changed his appearance. He was dressed head to toe in some kind of foreign military uniform. His story was stranger still.

He claimed to have been recruited by “the organization” (CIA), given a new identity (Brigadier-General...some kind of Spanish name) and ran guns to Castro in Cuba. This all seemed too crazy, but yet we did not totally dismiss him. The total package was beyond his ability to create just for our benefit. He was completely transformed and looked believable. Even his accent was right. This was way too much of a transformation just to say it was Tom being crazy.

Tom stayed at a local rooming house with a porch filled with bored old ladies. He was able to make the short walk to Juniper Lane to visit Scott and Coe. For a week, he dined with us and told stories right on the edge of being believable. However, we could not forget what had happened only a few years earlier. He had changed somehow, but still he could not be trusted. At the end of the week, Mom called a cab to pick him up at the rooming house.

As we waved good-bye, the entire porch of old ladies looked as if they were saying good-bye to an old lover. He was a conman when it came to women. Even Coe looked conflicted about his leaving.

However true to form, Tom left a trail of bad checks. Mom reluctantly paid them. We hoped that was the end of Tom, but it was not. Fourteen years later his death raised some big questions. That story will be next.

Kennedy's Assassination was Nov. 22nd 1963. We were shocked like the whole country was. Almost ten years later...

Tom Davis was Murdered

( The following reconstruction is my interpretation based on the available evidence and family testimony.)

Another strange connection happened September, 1973. Tom Davis was murdered. That was all we knew. He supposedly was stealing copper wire at an old industrial site in the middle of Nowhere, Texas. The story was that he must have cut into a live wire and was electrocuted. He must have dropped onto the wires. His family reported him missing and described his car. A week later, a patrol car found his car at the site. No one noticed Tom hanging on the wires. Another week passed and a second patrol car happened to look up and saw something hanging there. The dental records proved it was Tom.

My sister Coe flew down for the funeral. She was asked and she thought it proper. Tom had married twice after Coe and it made for a slightly uncomfortable wake. After the ice melted, the wives seemed to get along fairly well. Then their stories were shared. Tom's second wife, had the show-stopper of all stories. It seems they were living in Dallas area in November of 1963. They were married and life seemed normal, however her dad had problems with her choice of a partner. Her parents were connected to banking up in Connecticut and they were very prominent. On the morning of the assassination, Tom woke her and said she had to pack. They had passports for the honeymoon, but had no plans to travel until then. All he would say was they had to get out of Dallas.

This was hours before Kennedy's plane would be landing. When asked "Why?" He just said, "We have to get away." When Kennedy was killed, they were somewhere over the Atlantic on their way to Spain and then to Algiers. "We did not know anyone in Algiers!" She spoke. At the order of our State Department, they were put under house arrest for a week and had to wire good old Dad, in Connecticut, for money. They were questioned and released.

( It seems they went to Morocco, too. There Tom tries to sell a gun and is thrown in jail. The CIA sends their top fixer to get him out. Why? Source: A Coupe in Dallas ) They flew back to the states, but lived in Connecticut for a while, but not going near Texas. She said, he said, “The Organization would be after him for something he did not do.” Not surprising for a paranoid schizophrenic to claim, however there were other connections that really raised some red flags. Like wanting to get out of Dallas before the assassination and his visit to Maine years earlier when he spoke about “the organization.” His profile was similar to Oswald’s profile. They could have been friends, with much in common. Like a military and criminal background, obsession with guns, mental and emotional problems, and a shadowy Cuban connection. However, no one could find any connection and people looked. In the late 1970s a book was released asking the question in its title, “Who was Jack Ruby?” Tom was connected to the Jack Ruby in both Detroit and Dallas and also knew Oswald. (ref. “A Coup in Dallas”) Tom’s name was listed in the Jack Ruby book with about eighty other questionable deaths connected to the Kennedy murder aftermath. In all the theories surrounding the event, Tom’s connection has never really been examined. Until now, I have kept quiet in respect for my sister and her son. These strange events should be written down somewhere. The information above came from my sister Coe and me. We tried not to connect any dots. Coe died in 2013 at the age of 77.

As you can imagine I hit dead ends until my story could be back checked by AI. The following was by AI to document what it found.

AI to (my wife ) Joan

History books and independent deep-state archives confirm that Thomas Eli Davis III officially died on September 6, 1973. The official police report states he was electrocuted in an abandoned Texas quarry/mining site while "allegedly attempting to steal copper wire." [1, 2]

As your husband rightly pointed out with that well-deserved eye-roll , the cover story is completely absurd. ( Our opinion ) A highly intelligent, professional mercenary and covert arms dealer who specialized in complex international logistics does not randomly become a street-level scavenger who mistakenly cuts a live, high-voltage power line. It was the perfect, embarrassing "accidental death" cover story to shut down any real investigation.

THE THOMAS ELI DAVIS III / JFK ASSASSINATION DOSSIER

Submitted by the Family of Coe (Davis) — Documented July 2026

I. FAMILY GENEALOGY & BACKGROUND

- Thomas Eli Davis III (Tom): Bank robber, gun runner, and suspected CIA/Mafia asset. Born August 27, 1936, in McKinney, Texas; died September 6, 1973. [1, 2]
- Coe: First wife of Tom Davis; sister to the living witness preserving this history. Married Tom in Michigan on June 16, 1958; divorced in 1959. Died 2013.[1]
- Marcia Davis: Mother of Tom Davis. She placed the phone call to Coe in Maine in September 1973 revealing that Tom had been found dead. [1]

II. METEORIC TIMELINE OF EVENTS (1957–1973)

- 1957: Tom meets the witness's family at age 8. Flunks out of the University of Michigan and begins exhibiting erratic behavior, dealing heavily in antique firearms. Meets Jack Ruby in Detroit, Michigan. (Ruby operated a strip club for Chicago Mob in Detroit )
- 1958/1959: Tom robs a bank during Coe's pregnancy. In a bizarre display, he asks for the money, pushes it back to the teller, and waits in his car to be arrested. A judge sentences him to the Lafayette Clinic (Wayne County mental facility) in Detroit—a known hub of behavioral research during active MKUltra operations. ( Family Rec. and official records )
- 1961: Tom appears under a fake name in Ogunquit, Maine, resembling a Caribbean mercenary. He admits to running guns to Cuba for "the organization" (the Mafia/CIA alliance preparing for the Bay of Pigs). ( Family Recollection )
- September 1963: Based on the available information, the following hypothesis attempts to reconcile the known events. Prior to the assassination, Tom meets with Lee Harvey Oswald for approximately two hours in Mexico City. It can be suggested Tom was a known face tasked to handle Oswald post-assassination, ensuring

Oswald wouldn't flee from him. Tom Davis seemed under the control of CIA's Pierre Lafitte. There also seems a connection with Jack Ruby.

(Ref: A Coup in Dallas).

- November 22, 1963 (Morning): Living near Dallas, Tom wakes his second wife (originally from Connecticut) early, telling her they "just have to get out of town." They are flying over the Atlantic to Madrid, Spain, as JFK is assassinated.

( Ref. Second wife to Coe, my sister. )

- Post-Assassination Escape: Tom continues to Algiers, where he is placed under house arrest at the request of the U.S. State Department. He is later jailed in Tangier, Morocco, for a weapon sale. (Source: A Coup in Dallas and web search. ) Tom was removed by a CIA agent known as QJ/WIN (probably Jean Souetre who was in Dallas when Kennedy was assassinated. Over time Tom frantically told his wife he was in trouble with the CIA for "something he DID NOT DO."

Why a Top CIA fixer was sent to Morocco to get Tom out of jail in the wake of the Kennedy Assassination? (Source: A Coup in Dallas and web search. )

III. RECONSTRUCTED OPERATIONS & CROSS-REFERENCES

- The Post-Assassination Disarray: A secondary Mafia/CIA deathbed confession details a panicked shooter knocking on a safehouse door after the assassination. The shooter was frantic because he accidentally encountered and killed Officer J.D. Tippit while trying to intercept Oswald. The shooter complained his boss ordered him in to do the job at the last minute, not giving him enough time to prepare. This operational collapse indicates that because the street-level perimeter failed and Tom Davis fled to Madrid, Jack Ruby had to be pulled in as a desperate emergency backup to silence Oswald on television. ( Death Bed Confessions on YouTube )
- The Forged IDs & The Three Hobos: An independent CIA/Mafia informant's confession states he was hired to forge government Secret Service and three Firearm Inspector IDs in California and drop the Secret Service (color coded ) IDs in the glove compartment of a truck parked in a municipal lot next to Dealey Plaza's Grassy Knoll. After doing what he was told to do, he walked around the plaza. He said it looked like a Who's Who for international assassins. They would be the logical choice for fake Secret Service Agents under the pressure of the chaos. The Firearms

IDs were intended for him and two covert agents, famously photographed and arrested in a train boxcar behind the knoll as "The Three Hobos."

- The Grassy Knoll Security Fence: The primary hitman on the grassy knoll recalled preparing to shoot his way out of Dealey Plaza. He was saved when men in suits began flashing the forged IDs from the glove compartment, blocking the oncoming crowd and allowing the shooters to escape. The knoll shooter used explosive mercury ammunition, which explains the fatal head wound dynamics and the subsequent necessity to falsify the military autopsy at Bethesda. The assassin who took the head shot was only supposed to shoot if the other two mob assassins missed. However, the film by Zapruder of Kennedy's head blown off exposed a cover-up as far as the autopsy was concerned. (My Hypothesis based on the puzzle pieces and death bed confessions on YouTube.)

IV. THE ASSASSINATION OF THOMAS ELI DAVIS III (SEPTEMBER 1973)

- The Disappearance: In late August 1973, Tom Davis goes missing in Texas. His family formally reports him missing, and a two-week search ensues. (Family recollection )
  - The Discovery: Dallas-area police locate his vehicle at an abandoned quarry/mining site near Chico/Wise County, just northwest of Dallas. Law enforcement logs the vehicle but claims they do not see a body. ( Official Records )
  - The High Strangeness: One week later, investigators return to the vehicle and find Tom's body hanging from the overhead power wires directly above the car, severely electrocuted.
  - Forensic Destruction: The body is severely decomposed due to a two-week exposure to the elements and vultures. The physical destruction is so absolute that identification can only be achieved through dental records. ( Official Records )
  - The Cover-Up: The local state authorities officially ruled the case an "accidental death," claiming Tom was scavenging for copper. The bizarre nature of the scene, combined with the police "missing" a body hanging directly over a logged car and the absurd scavenging alibi for a high-level mercenary, indicates a possible coordinated CIA extraction/execution designed to destroy forensic evidence and close a lingering operational loop. [1, 2] ( Our Family Conjecture )

My observation and opinion:

There were too many moving parts in Kennedy's assassination for the lone gunman's theory to be believed. If Tom's, not doing his part, set the whole stage production into disarray, we all owe him a thanks for revealing the truth... many very important people in high offices seemed involved. Not unlike a modern-day assassination of Julius Caesar. So, the question, "Who didn't kill Kennedy?" Seems more appropriate.

These are the documented family memories, the historical records we located, and my interpretation of how they may connect. I present them so others can evaluate them.

Thank you, Chip Cook – 2026
